Dear Mr. Dulles:

Enclosed is the Gisevius contract. We have simply used our standard form and excepted only translation rights, which presumably the author is handling himself. As I said over the telephone, we certainly do not insist on handling the British Empire rights, though it would indeed be convenient for us to do so if the British publisher is to use the same translation. I shouldn't think there would be much difficulty in selling the book in London.

Again, many thanks for your cooperation. I am looking forward eagerly to reading the English manuscript.

Sincerely yours,
